Ori Bespoke

Ori Bespoke serves to reignite a passion for the once lost Su embroidery technique through exquisite designs that can be displayed in the home

Delivering an exclusive and elegant service, Ori Bespoke strives for perfection in every product it creates.

Founded in 2017 by Pei Li, Ori Bespoke takes its name from the words 'original' and 'oriental' and was established with an aim to preserve and revive traditional oriental hand embroidery techniques, specifically the once-lost Su embroidery method.

Referencing traditional Eastern designs and patterns, every item from Ori Bespoke combines the classic with the contemporary for an elegant design approach. As a child Pei Li used to join his family for Chinese Lantern Festival, which was always something very special. Pei Li has combined the oriental traditional and modern visual elements to achieve a level of functional art objects, developing an approach which can be applied universally in various interior settings. The aim is to preserve and revive a traditional oriental embroidery technique; specifically the once-lost Su embroidery method and combine it with contemporary design approaches.

Ideal for high-end residential, or hospitality interior design, Ori Bespoke's collection is a custom-made service that specialises in modern oriental design. Experts in the Su embroidery, Ori Bespoke can deliver photorealistic pieces or create a bespoke new detail, which is designed to a unique specification and handmade with care and the utmost precision.

Ideal for use on upholstered furniture or as a decorative piece of material within the home. Ori Bespoke launched its first range of table lamps, and displayed its collection of fine embroidery designs in September 2018 during Decorex.
